Wage earners and their craft unions, trade unions, and industrial organizations, are of increasing import in Montana's economic and social structure. Wages of its workers constitutes the major buying power of society. Continuity of employment, adequacy of wage levels, the maintenance of reasonable standards of living and work conditions, all these are recognized as primary fields to which the cooperative assistance of this government is extended.

To promote that continuity of employment, and to assure maximum employment opportunities at suitable work to all qualified work applicants, the state and federal system of employment service and job insurance is maintained. The service of employment is designed to strengthen and supplement the individual and collective efforts of the workers themselves toward continued wage status. Aid in bridging the gap between termination of one job and the commencement of new employment is provided through the weekly benefit checks of unemployment compensation.

Both of these services --- employment and insurance --- are made available to Montana workers through the local Montana State Employment Service offices, maintained by the Commission under the laws of Montana and the United States.
